The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

THE GRAVE famine conditions on the densely populated eastern seaboard of India add to the concern already felt over the continued British-Indian political crisis in this vast colony which not only is Allied arsenal of the Orient but principal base for the coming offensive against Japan through Burma.

Latest dispatches say that over 100,000 hungry people are being fed in Bengal province which has a population of 60,000,000. In the great port of Calcutta alone, there have been 50 deaths per day from starvation. An army of hungry folk some 100,000 strong wanders in the streets without shelter.

This plague of starvation didn't come without warning to India the bulk of whose population of 400,000,000 always is hungry even in best of times. When I returned from India at the end of February after studying conditions there, I reported in this column that there was a serious food situation which threatened to get worse.

The trouble was due to several factors. Among these were hoarding of grain, faulty distribution, shipment of foodstuffs abroad to feed troops, and shortage of rice owing to Japanese occupation of Burma from which India normally has obtained great quantities of this food, especially big Bengal province.

Indian and British observers, foreseeing a worsening of the food shortage, were fearful lest unscrupulous people should be able to merge the hunger situation with the political discontent for ulterior purposes. That would be a terrible combination.

The prisoners then held thousands of Indians who had been concerned in the bloody disturbances which followed the Indian rejection of the Cripps offer of dominion status after the war. The Indians had demanded immediate independence. Many of the great native leaders including Mahatma Gandhi, were under lock and key. They still are.

Now the dread scourge of hunger has arrived, and it is an ironic circumstance that it should be striking most heavily in Bengal. This province is at once the hotbed of anti-government activities, and the place from which many of the Allied invasion forces must strike at Burma across the Bay of Bengal. Oil and water.

The government of India says the political situation is absolutely in hand. The lid is clamped on the discontented elements and there is no danger that it will blow off. Emergency measures are being taken to meet the food crisis.

Despite these assurances, there is much concern among American military men who are in India with our steadily growing fighting units. They are recognizing that while order may be maintained by force.

FOURTEEN DIE IN MINE BLAST

Nine Others Are Injured In Explosion at Minersville, Pa., Today

MINERSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 25. — Fourteen men were dead today and nine others injured, one of them seriously, after an explosion ripped through the fifth level of the Mofett-Schrader coal mine, 1,200 feet below the surface, at nearby Forestville, late yesterday.

Mine officials, who said there was no indication as to the cause of the blast, reported 10 other bodies still underground. Seven of these were identified.

All rescue operations were ordered stopped last night by Richard Malze, state secretary of mines, who said deadly black damp gas was endangering the lives of rescue workers.

The nine injured men were taken to a hospital in nearby Pottsville, most of them suffering from burns, bruises and shock.

Rescue squads from the U. S. Bureau of Mines and crews from nearby collieries arrived at the mine late last night and are standing by ready for action as soon as the black damp can be blown out.

The mine employs approximately only 600 men but only 200 were at work at the time of the explosion.

Drivers Receive Minor Injuries In Accident

Both drivers sustained minor injuries in the collision of two cars at 5:45 a. m. today at the Columbiana-Stark county line on Route 62 near Alliance.

The accident occurred when a car driven by Dale Burton Tasker, 19, of R. D. 1, Homeworth, started to pass a machine driven by Ralph Edward Nupp, 17, of R. D. 1, Paris, as the latter attempted to make a left turn. The Nupp car turned over, striking and breaking off a utility pole.

Tasker had an abrasion of the right leg and Nupp received a bruise on the left side of the head.

Ohio Is Over Top In War Bond Drive

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Sept. 25. — Ohio has exceeded its $638,000,000 War Bond quota in the Third War Loan drive by $5,000,000 to become the third state in the union to go over the top.

The Treasury announced the Buckeye state passed its quota yesterday, joining Maryland and Rhode Island. Ohio is the first of the so-called "Big Six" states to beat the Oct. 2 deadline, the department reported.

The Treasury announced the Buckeye state passed its quota yesterday, joining Maryland and Rhode Island. Ohio is the first of the so-called "Big Six" states to beat the Oct. 2 deadline, the department reported.

Many pledges have been fulfilled this week, but a large number still are at both national banks, awaiting the signers' money so pledges can be turned into orders.

Unconfirmed reports said three persons were carried from the wrecked automobile. None was reported injured by the fire which destroyed the Eagle Rubber Co. and the Erie's passenger depot and freight station alongside the railway. Damage estimates were not determined immediately but were expected to be in the thousands.

Flames menaced nearby residents.

ASHLAND FIRE MENACES CITY

Rubber Plant, Railroad Station Burn After Tank Cars Leave Rails

(By Associated Press) ASHLAND, Sept. 25. — Flames which destroyed the Eagle Rubber Co. and Erie railroad freight and passenger facilities after two tank cars left the rails, exploded and struck a parked automobile, were brought under control today after an all-night fight.

The fire department reported that assistance from eight neighboring cities or communities succeeded in quenching flames after burning gasoline poured through storm sewers of Ashland's east side, menacing homes in this city of 15,000 residents.

There was no immediate estimate of damage.

Police Sgt. L. V. Young said the blast which occurred last night, set fire to eight other cars and sent the motor fuel pouring into the sewers.

STORAGE CO. FIRE LOSS IS 4 MILLION

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 25. — The fire in the windowless, fireproof fur and clothing warehouse of the Yale Cold Storage Corp., was still burning today after almost 24 hours, with the owner, Benjamin T. Lassman, estimating his loss at $4,000,000.

Nine firemen were either treated at the scene or hospitalized. During the blaze, firemen broke five-foot holes through the brick walls with pneumatic drills to let out the fumes.

Nine companies of firemen battled the blaze which they called the most baffling in the city's history.

The building is fireproof itself but the contents burned furiously.

YANKS CONTROL MOUNTAIN AREA ABOVE NAPLES

5th Army Fights Way Into Hills In Furious Day, Night Attack

(By Associated Press) ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 25. — Lt. Mark W. Clark's American Fifth army has fought its way onto hills looking down on the plain of Naples in a furious day and night offensive supported by heavy artillery barrages and resisted by German tanks as well as strong gun emplacements. Allied headquarters stated today.

Meanwhile, Allied fighters shot down 19 Junkers-52 transports in another sweep against the hard-pressed enemy's air-evacuation movement from Corsica where French patriots and regulars and American Rangers were pressing him into a tight corner.

Struggling forward over terrain so difficult that pack mules were used extensively to carry up guns and ammunition, Gen. Clark's men gained a foothold on the top of mountains extending from Vesuvius and Pompei in their drive on Naples.

In the words of the headquarters spokesman the Allied troops could watch "our air forces knocking hell out of enemy communications in the area below."

Terrific Artillery Fire

Reports from the front said the whole rugged mountain area north and northeast of Salerno was brilliantly lighted throughout the night by the flashes of a terrific artillery duel between hundreds of Allied and German guns.

Clark, who appeared to have been swinging somewhat eastward from his previous hard course due north of Salerno in a drive to outflank Naples, now seemed to be thrusting forward with Vesuvius as a beacon, and a breakthrough in the mountain area appeared possible at any time.

The spokesman said "the tempo of the battle will increase tremendously" once the Allies drive the enemy onto the plains below.

An indication that the Germans despaired of ever being able to establish a strong defensive line across the whole Italian peninsula, which would enable them to retain possession of Naples, was seen in the fact that the British Eighth army advanced 15 miles up the Adriatic coast from Bari to the outskirts of the town of Molfetta without encountering enemy resistance.

The communiqué confirmed the fall of Altamura in southeastern Italy to British forces, first announced in field dispatches yesterday, and said that the Eighth army is "advancing according to plan" at points inland from the northward surge of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces.

In the Fifth army's full scale offensive to knock off Naples the German resistance "is aided by"

He will be succeeded here by Rev. John P. Lavelle, Leontina native, who comes from St. Brendan's church in Youngstown.

Turn Your Clocks Back Hour Sometime Sunday

Tomorrow is the day, and 2 a. m. the hour for Salemites to turn their clocks back one hour, returning to Eastern Standard time. Careful souls may stay up until 2 a. m. to turn back their clocks, but most people plan to change them before retiring for the night, to enjoy fully that extra hour's sleep.

School hours remain the same next week, with the exception of the High school which opens at 8:45, instead of 9. The postoffice is remaining on a War time schedule to conform to railroad schedules.

Taylor Is Honored At Farewell Party

Former state senator R. John Taylor, who will leave Sunday for Washington, D. C., to begin training as a Red Cross field director, was honored at a dinner last night at the Salem Golf club.

Taylor, retired head of the Salem rationing board, was presented a leather bag as a gift by the group, which included ration board members. V. R. Martin made the presentation.

Remarks outlining Taylor's work on the rationing program were given by L. B. Harris, Loefer Caplan, Robert Campbell, South Metzger, Herbert Nolan and Martin, representing various sections of the board.

Arrangements for the dinner were made by Sidney Haines, T. A. Miller, Glenn Harding and Caplan.

Taylor will attend training classes at the American university in Washington for three weeks, completing his instruction with three more weeks at a military camp. He may be assigned to Army or Navy, in foreign or home service.

Personal Tax Period May Open About Oct. 15

LISBON, Sept. 25.—The collection of general personal and classified property tax for the current year will be opened about Oct. 15, Auditor L. J. Vordman said today.

Inter-county returns on utilities are now being received from the state and duplicates on inventories and equipment, stock and investments are now being prepared and will be placed in the mail by Oct. 15, he explained, adding that the closing date will probably be Nov. 1.

Although many persons in Columbiana county paid the full year with the first half personal tax collection, those in the East Liverpool school district will receive another tax statement because of the 2-mill levy voted for school purposes, which, according to law, must be collected at this time.

ALLIES SEIZE JAP AIRFIELD

Finschhafen Base Provides MacArthur With Offensive Center

(By Associated Press) ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 25. —The Finschhafen airfield has been wrested from the Japanese, giving Gen. Douglas MacArthur a New Guinea base for his planes 75 miles from the enemy's strategically important bastion of New Britain.

Australians who landed from the sea six miles north of Finschhafen Wednesday captured the field and no war within three quarters of a mile of the town, headquarters reported today.

The impending capture of Finschhafen would add 60 more miles of shoreline — that between Finschhafen and Lae — to the New Guinea coastal region under Allied control.

From Finschhafen's airfield it is an 85-mile flight to the enemy air-drome of Cape Gloucester and 165 miles to the Gasmata air-drome. New Britain bases guarding the way up that crescent-shaped island to Rabaul, a stronghold with three air-dromes and a harbor capable of accommodating a good sized fleet.

Today's communiqué reported that fighters, identified by a spokesman as P-40s, dive-bombed installations on the tiny island of Gasmata.

In other air activity reported today, Mitchells swung inland along the Markham valley beyond positions seized by paratroopers Sept. 5. The bombers dropped many tons of explosives and fired 41,000 rounds of ammunition at Japanese trying a back door escape from the debacle at Lae. The Mitchells roamed as far as Ragisuma, 80 miles northwest of Lae, without spotting an enemy plane.

Rev. Dewey, who has been a prisoner of the Japanese, had not been heard from since June 3, 1941. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan university and Drew Field Theological seminary and had charge of a mission at Hoppel Changli, China.

His wife, the former Carol McCurdy of Columbus, was also a missionary to China but returned home several years ago.

GERMANS ADMIT RETREAT FROM GREAT BASTION

Abandonment Signalizes One of Soviet's Greatest Victories

By JAMES M. LONG

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The German high command announced today that German troops have evacuated Smolensk, greatest Nazi base on the Russian central front for more than two years. On the basis of the German announcement the Red army has won one of its greatest victories of the war.

Evacuation of the city, 210 miles northeast of threatened Kiev and 230 miles west of Moscow, was announced in a communiqué broadcast by DNB and recorded by The Associated Press. Abandonment of Roslavl, rail town 65 miles southeast of Smolensk, also was reported in the communiqué.

Col. Ernst Von Hammer, military correspondent of the Nazi international information bureau with the German armies on the eastern front said in a dispatch broadcast by DNB that evacuation had started three weeks ago and that the Germans had successfully removed all their war plants to the west, while the communiqué declared that they had destroyed all military installations in the city.

Disastrous Defeat The German war bulletin said that Nazi columns were attacking in the Lake Ladoga region in the Leningrad salient and had repulsed Soviet tank-supported counter-attacks on the Murmansk sector in the far north.

The fall of Smolensk was regarded here as one of the most disastrous defeats suffered by German forces in the current Russian offensive.

In the nine months since a battered Red army threw back the Germans from Stalingrad, the Russians have accomplished two thirds of their task of hurling the invaders from Soviet soil.

Hitler's steadily-retreating forces have now given up all but about 230,000 of the 700,000 square miles of Soviet territory held at the height of their successes, and hold only about three per cent of Russia's 8,800,000 square-mile area.

Even in its easternmost penetration at Stalingrad the Germans occupied only about nine per cent of that vast nation.

Since then the Red army has driven them westward 650 miles and now stands a bare 150 miles from the old Polish border. Another 150-mile retreat would place the Germans on the "Gibberopol-Molotov" line, the springboard of Hitler's invasion of Russia on June 6, 1941.

Fall of the bastion would constitute one of the most disastrous defeats suffered by German forces in the current Russian offensive.

ONLY ONE COUNTY CANDIDATE QUILTS

Only one name was removed from the ballot by the Columbiana county board of elections today when the deadline was reached for withdrawal of candidates for municipal, village, township and school district offices at the Nov. 2 election.

Frank Laughlin, 67, who has served two terms as a member of the Wayne rural school district board of education, withdrew his candidacy because of ill health.

Independent municipal tickets were assured in East Liverpool, East Palestine, Salem and Columbiana.

Ross H. Dorff, defeated for the Democratic nomination for mayor at the Aug. 10 primary, was listed for Second ward councilman in East Liverpool, opposing Paul V. Baxter, Republican, and Jay J. Fugh, Democrat.

George Bricker of Salem, Phil C. Elsass of East Palestine and Jacob L. Hum of Columbiana village, were given ballot places as independent nominees for mayor.

Bricker will oppose Mayor Robert R. Johnson, Republican, seeking a second term. Elsass will run against Mayor Walter A. Hunston, also a Republican, candidate for a fourth term in East Palestine, while Hum filed against Kenneth E. Gormley, Republican, in Columbiana village. No Democratic mayoral nominee was named in the three subdivisions.

Elections will be held in the county's 13 cities and villages, 19 townships and 24 school districts.

ONLY ONE RIGHT ANSWER

Americans safe at home must not give their fighting men abroad any excuse for saying, "The war news from home doesn't sound so good. They're having trouble with the Third War Loan drive."

Our fighting men have been giving us good news. They have been giving the war the extra effort that wins. They have a right to expect the folks back home to do the same.

Are you waiting for someone to urge you to buy a War Bond? Are you holding back? Are you willing to tell a boy who was wounded at Salerno or in New Guinea that you never got around to buying a War Bond?

There's only one right answer when the time comes to meet the question. You will buy as many War Bonds as you can afford to buy for the sake of American fighting men who are paying with their lives.

WITHDRAWAL IN ITALY

Military action against Germany in Corsica and by patriot bands across the peninsula at the top of the Adriatic must not be dismissed as isolated details of the battle for Italy proper. The Allies are behind Germany's lines, in a position to cut off German forces in the Italian peninsula.

Depending on their ability to establish major air bases in Corsica and to spread the unrest in northern Italy, bringing it to a climax ultimately with new landings at the top of the Adriatic, Germany must stage a withdrawal in Italy. It cannot fight there if outflanked by a combination of land, air and naval power.

Gen. Eisenhower's strategy is clear. It is an adaptation of the successful strategy used against the Germans and Italians in North Africa, when they were forced to retreat into the hands of an enemy occupying a position behind them. Bombers from Corsica and guerrilla bands in the Piume neighborhood are omens of defeat. In their retreat from Naples, the Germans can have no assurance of safety. At any moment, the enemy may appear in force behind them.

MUSSOLINI IN A SLOUCH HAT

When you finally come across the photograph purporting to show Mussolini shaking hands with Hitler after German paratroopers had delivered the Italian Quisling to his master, note the get-up.

Mussolini in a slouch hat and an ordinary overcoat looks about the same as any other southern European. If the picture is of him and not some reasonable facsimile, he didn't even have a chance to stick out his chin and bug out his eyes. There is no funny little hat to attract attention, no trick shirt, no padded uniform blouse with photo-genic piping. This is just Benny the Bum in mufti, making the observer wonder how much of the terror struck into the hearts of men by the conspirators of violence in this generation might be traced to exploitation of military uniforms.

There are pictures of Hitler extant, showing him as a touselled individual with a curious mustache. Here is to the not too distant day when the principal ruffians of the Axis conspiracy can be photographed in adjoining cells for what they are—two psychopathic characters who were let loose and bathed the world in blood.

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE FOR GERMANY

The glider torpedo reported in use by Germany's air force for attacks on shipping will be, if it works, the war's first new weapon. But if this is what Hitler meant in his latest speech when he threatened Germany's enemies with terrible revenge, it is too little and too late.

By an ironic twist, the weapons that are winning the war are nothing but better developed models of the weapons Germany adapted from the crude versions manufactured originally by its enemies. Allied heavy bombers, better than German heavy bombers, are demonstrating the potentialities of bombing. Allied tanks, armored cars, artillery and even submarines, Germany's best weapon, are overcoming the myth of German superiority so widely subscribed to in 1939.

The German "nerve gas" that was going to demoralize the enemy proved to be nothing but propaganda. The vaunted Stukas, when finally put to the test against an antagonist prepared to cope with them, turned out to be dive bombers too slow to hold their own against first class fighting planes. And the glider torpedo, when its potentialities have been discovered, probably will turn out to be just another weapon of limited usefulness.

GIVE-AND-TAKE DIPLOMACY

Rising awareness of the ordinary citizen's personal stake in a sound foreign policy is one of the major political trends at the moment. Both parties are trying to do something about it in connection with next year's election.

Meanwhile, the Democratic party, which must do something about it immediately, being in charge of the government, is confronted with one of the most ticklish foreign policy problems imaginable, in the case of Russia. It must devise a policy acceptable not only to a frankly critical Russian government but acceptable to an American public inclined to be critical of Russian criticism. If it pleases one, it is almost certain to displease the other.

The American public is chiefly concerned at the outset of the forthcoming Russian dealings with the importance of give-and-take diplomacy. It is hostile to the possibility that this government may be so eager to please Marshal Stalin's government that American dignity will be sacrificed to some transitory scheme of expediency. The American public wants its government to remind Russia that its criticisms of the United States have their counterpart.

If give-and-take is going to be the rule for postwar international relations, the time to start is now. As Eric Johnston, president of United States Chamber of Commerce, proposes as the basis for accord with Great Britain, there should be honest recognition by the United States and Russia of certain irreconcilable differences.

That is a fundamental requirement for United States foreign policy—it must assume retention of complete sovereignty by both parties to every understanding. The American people will not take kindly to any suggestion of yielding to Russia what Russia plainly doesn't intend to yield to the United States—the right to reject the other fellow's ideas.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, September 26

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a fairly fortunate one, especially for church affairs, for students and placing the interests on a secure and enduring foundation. Social and cultural associations should happily offset dubious business conditions.

Those whose birthday it is may have an opportunity during the year, to put their affairs and the future on a firm and enduring basis. With application, good methods and perseverance there should be progress and happiness.

For Monday, September 27

Monday's astrological forecast is a difficult and disintegrating one, with sudden and radical upheavals or separations. This might be due to erratic or impulsive behavior or some emotional disturbance.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a difficult year, in which estrangements, sudden reversals or abrupt upsets may complicate matters. This may be owing to interference of elders, strangers, or busybodies, inciting to impulsive or erratic behaviors. Tact and restraint may avert such difficulties. Sign all writings with great care and deliberation.

A child born on this day may be temperamental to its detriment. It should have discipline.

ALLIED PLANES HIT JAPS IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC

GROWING ALLIED STRENGTH in the Pacific has pushed further north the dotted line which demarcates Jap-held territory. Originally the Japs controlled the entire area, until the Allies made their first move at Port Moresby. Now, with Lae and Salamaua in our hands, increasing pressure is being placed on enemy bases north of the line. U. S. and Australian planes have hit Jap installations at Finschhafen and on New Britain, site of Rabaul, the enemy's most important base.

Sees U. S. Serving Post-War World As Ship Broker

By ROBERT M. FARRINGTON

Any vision of America becoming the world's greatest sea power with her huge prospective fleet of 50,000,000 deadweight tons (the equivalent of the pre-war merchant marines of Britain, U. S., Norway, Germany and Japan combined) must be tempered with at least two realistic considerations.

One, the cost of operating American ships is high (because of better food and wages) and make subsidies inevitable. After the war, taxpayers may be sensitive about laying out one indefinitely for operating bills which in 1940-41 ran over $13,000,000 when we had some 10,500,000 deadweight tons of ships. No one will even guess at the subsidies on five times this tonnage.

May Build Some of Ours

Two, foreign nations, especially Britain, depend a good deal on the income from their shipping and will build their own vessels to carry their goods — and probably half of ours, too. Not since clipper ship days (when American costs and wages were low) have we carried nearly all our own foreign trade. Just before the war we carried about 30 per cent, the balance went in foreign ships.

Dedicated reciprocal trade agreements would be upset and a pinch develop in some other trade or industry in the country, shipping circles believe, if we tried to insist on shipping American cargoes. A 50-50 balance is about the best that can be hoped for, they say.

The postwar planning committee of the maritime commission currently is wrestling with the problem of utilizing our merchant fleet rather than laying up hundreds of ships to rust in idleness as was done after the last war.

A great rush of business continuing for perhaps five years, is anticipated when peace comes. As part of a live-and-let-live policy, a large percentage of our slower Liberty ships may be sold to foreign countries who are without ocean tonnage.

Everyone Would Suffer

Although these ships then would compete with American ships, this is a reasonable alternative to trying to corner all the trade, thus forcing other nations to build their own ships. The world would then end up with far more ships than trade, and everyone would suffer.

The maritime commission now is busy swinging over from the slow, easily-built Liberty ship to the more-complicated 15-17 knot Victory ship, believing fast cargo ships will give America the edge in post-war trade. Some 25 per cent of the fleet is expected to be Victory ships by the war's end, and these would be kept for purchase by Americans.

Disposing of the ships to private owners, both American and foreign, has been a plenty for the commission. The Liberty costs $165-170 a ton; the Victory "over $200". They can be built for much less in other countries because of cheaper labor and if the maritime commission holds out for the cost price, owners may turn around and order ships from foreign yards, meanwhile renting the American ships.

Allow Differential

The commission already is authorized to allow American owners a construction differential of 50 per cent of the cost of building ships in foreign countries so as to encourage them to place their orders with American yards. In 1940-41 this differential subsidy almost reached $74,000,000.

In selling Liberties to other nations some sort of bargain rate may be established so as to dispose of the vessels while there are buyers.

The cost of a ship has a direct bearing on its profitable operation and if foreign buyers can make more money building their own ships they will, and finally a glut of ships may knock the bottom out of the market.

In the long run this might cost more than the loss America would take selling her ships below construction price.

Planes Direct Traffic

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Traffic jams after the war at such events as football and baseball games will be handled from helicopters with orders and instructions to the motorists coming from a radio voice, according to Louis F. Soster, expert in such matters. Such planes are already being constructed, he says, ready to be turned over for civilian use as soon as the war ends.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Nerves Cause Dyspepsia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. PLATO, in his Dialogues, thus describes at one place a person named Herodotus:

"He had a mortal disease which he perpetually tended, and as recovery was out of the question he passed his whole life as an invalid; he could do nothing but attend upon himself and was in constant torment whenever he departed in anything from his usual regimen, and so dying hard, by the help of science he struggled on to an old age, a rare reward of his skill."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The type did not die out in Plato's day. Everyone must know one or two examples of the chronic self-made invalid.

Complaints of Invalids

Doctors know plenty. And any time one falls the least in sympathy or suggests that maybe there isn't anything very serious the matter after all, the chronic invalid flares up and says, "Well, you don't think I enjoy being sick, do you? I wouldn't make myself sick, would I?" But that is just what they do. I am in receipt of a very interesting book with a suggestive subtitle—"A Study of the Will to be Sick." These people have the will to be sick, even though they don't recognize it. Of all the nervous invalids, the nervous dyspeptics are the most nervous. This can be explained on the basis that the digestive tract is the most primitive structure in the anatomy. The lowest, simplest animals are all stomachs. As we ascend in the scale, a nervous system grows up around the stomach. And man still has a good deal of nervous system around his stomach, and the stomach and digestive system respond to emotions more readily than any other organic system in the body.

Thus emotions certainly stop appetite — anorexia. And they cause nausea. And the nervous system causes spasms in the stomach, or intestine, which pass for indigestion or dyspepsia.

Influenced by Suggestion

Various influences in life—early home training and experiences—acquaintance with a parent or other relative who is always talking about bowels and stomach ulcers or palpitations of the heart, or feeling weak, or vitamins, will create a subconscious personality which concentrates on one or the other of the systems of the body—digestive, heart, nutrition.

All through life that person is conditioned in moments of stress to break down in whatever system his subconscious was attached to. And the subconscious is the largest part of our mental and emotional life like an iceberg, only one-third is above in the conscious sphere where it can be recognized.

In treatment these people should be treated by psychology, but they usually are not. They are great self-treaters and self-indicators—they switch from pills to powders to liquids to vitamins and back again. They should avoid diets and learn to eat everything—but they go for diet, borrow them from each other, separate their proteins from their carbohydrates and every other fool thing.

They should avoid operations, but they are suckers for them—infectious teeth, tonsils, chronic appendix, gallbladder, etc. They really don't like psychology, which is what is good for them, but they enjoy a long life of suffering.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

L. S. V.—Is water a source of infection for familial paralysis? Since it will soon be the season of the year for this and I have a small daughter, I would like to know.

Answer: A very timely question. Several epidemics have been associated with groups of children swimming either in rivers or in lakes or the ocean near the outlet of rivers. It has been suggested that the river water is contaminated with sewage. No connection, so far as I know has ever been proved with drinking water.

A. M.—Please tell me what coronary occlusion is?

Answer: The arteries of the heart are called the coronary arteries. When one of them is stopped by a clot it is called coronary occlusion.

F. K.—What is the best way of disinfecting mattresses?

Answer: It is quite a problem. Heat sterilization, even if apparatus is available, can rarely be done without deleterious effect on cotton, felt or horsehair mattresses. Probably best is to encase the mattress in removable, washable muslin covers during occupancy by patient with contagious disease. Remove the covers and brush the entire surface of the mattress with 2 per cent saponated solution of cresol. For vermin, subject the mattress to hydrocyanic gas in a closed vault for two hours.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Femline Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Special Plates for Cars Of Officials Revoked

BUENOS AIRES—The Ramirez government, whose reforms have cost many an Argentine cherished privileges conceded by previous regimes, has brought fresh pain to former big shots by eliminating the prized white license plate for automobiles.

The white license plate formerly was issued to government officials, diplomats and others with influence in the proper places. In effect its possession constituted a blanket exemption from compliance with the traffic laws.

About 20 per cent of the candy and chocolate produced in the U. S. in 1942 was shipped for consumption by armed forces at home and abroad.

Graduates Twice

SPARTANBURG, S. C.—Graduating from college once in a lifetime is sufficient for most people, but Aviation Cadet Roper O. Purdy, III, of Monroe, N. C., did it twice in one year—and from the same college.

Purdy was called into the Army air corps after three and one-half years at Wofford college. When a civilian graduating class was given diplomas, Purdy got one on the strength of his previous scholastic record.

A few months later he completed a five-month pre-flight course at Wofford and received a second diploma under auspices of the Army Air Corps.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

Two weeks had passed since they brought Spud back to the Rio Bravo. Though he was entirely recovered from the concussion, his sight, as Diaz had predicted, was wholly gone. Through all these black days Molly carried on with a quiet courage that won the admiration of every man in camp, but twice Gloria found her alone in the shack crying her heart out. In two weeks she had aged.

Spud himself tried to pass off every expression of sympathy with a joke. "From now on," he told the men, "it's Molly who'll have to shake out my shoes for centipedes in the morning."

But it was heart-breaking to see him feeling his way about the shack, colliding with the wall, letting himself down gingerly into a chair, learning clumsily and laboriously to take up the complex task of living. Yet he was more philosophical than Drew himself, and refused even to talk of leaving the shack until the well was brought in. For as the days passed that well had come to symbolize victory for him. Everything depended on that.

And Spud was far from helpless. Twenty years of drilling now stood him in good stead, and after a few groping trials he took his place on the derrick floor, drilling by the feel of the lever, getting his pressures from Pedro, his devoted assistant. He worked his shifts just as steadily as in the days before the accident, and Drew's heart ached as he watched him standing there, one hand on the brake lever, looking straight ahead of him with bandaged, sightless eyes.

So life went on while day followed day. Nothing changed. The same roar of the boilers, the creaking rattle of the chain drive, the hiss of steam. Men in brown fiber helmets clambered up over the derrick, greasing the crown block, moving at their tasks about the engine, while the steam puffed out over the mud pit, and foot by foot the drill cut deeper. Five thousand feet. Fifty-five hundred. Time and the river flowed lazily, and day and night passed over the jungle as it has since time began.

At six thousand feet they ran into water, and Drew used nearly all his cement to bring him above the flow.

The formation became harder; bits had to be replaced more often. Precious time could be lost in moments like these unless each man acted as a well-trained part of a perfectly functioning whole. Each time a bit was changed the slush pumps had to be stopped, the table clutch thrown out of gear, and slowly the drill pipe was raised out of the well, while high up on the fourble board the derrick man swung the upper ends of those heavy steel cylinders to rest. Joint after joint of drill pipe rose and was stacked away until, worn and dull, the old bit appeared. Quickly it was unscrewed, a newly sharpened bit took its place and the drill pipe lowered back into the hole again. The work went on.

So skillfully the men moved at their task it was hard to realize that tons of steel were being moved about by that little handful of workers on the derrick floor.

More eagerly than ever now, Drew looked forward to Gloria's nightly return from the hospital and to the few precious moments they could spend alone by the river. There, for the time at least, the noise, the stress, and the thousand besetting problems of the day were forgotten. Time and the world ceased to exist for them while they sat there on that tiny patch of river sand screened by palms, and the tree frogs raised their shrill chorus and the jungle sounds came closer.

For Drew there were golden hours when nothing seemed real but the dark-haired girl in his arms and the dreams they wove with the bright threads of love and hope and youth. Yet even here they could not always escape the shadows of the day.

Twice she had tried to see her father, but each time the terse word came back to her that Dr. Diaz was occupied. How deeply it wounded her Drew could not even guess, for she spoke of it only once, and that night she clung to him with a kind of desperate longing. His head was on her knees, and for a long time she held his face between her hands while her eyes passed over him like a caress.

He smiled up at her. "What is it, chiquita?" he had asked. "Do you know you're all I have in the world now?" she whispered. "I thought of that today, and I was afraid. All my life belongs to you—all my future, everything bound up in one person."

Again he smiled. "Sorry?" "You know I am not. But a little afraid. For I thought of what life sometimes does. I thought of Spud—and today I thought of Franz Alter, and I wondered what the end would be."

Softly Drew's fingers moved upward through her hair. Don't let the future frighten you, little sweetheart. We have one another. Nothing can ever change that. "As if I ever forget it! Even for a single moment." Her lips bent to meet his lips, but he could still see the shadow of fear within her eyes. Sometimes she was so late returning from the States Oil hospital that instead of going to the river they sat on the porch with Spud while the cool winds blew over the savanna and the short-wave radio brought them the news of the world.

"It's funny," Spud said on one such evening. "I wake up wondering why everything's dark, thinking it's still night. A fellow never realizes how wonderful color is until he's lost it. Yesterday I remembered a dress Molly wore when she was just a kid. It must have been twenty-five years ago, but the memory of it—" Spud groped for the dial of the radio. "It got me. I guess."

And Drew laid a hand on Spud's shoulder while grief, sharp as physical pain, wrung his heart.

"The first thing we do when the well comes in," he said, "is to get those eyes fixed. That's our big job." Drew looked at the calendar—it had to be soon.

Sergei, the criller, became a more troublesome problem now that Spud could no longer watch him. Twice he was too drunk to work, and both times Spud took the extra shift. Drew, already suspicious of the Russian's loyalty, wanted to pay him off, but both times Spud, advised patience.

"Put Hank in Sergei's shift to keep an eye on things," Spud counseled. "If you fire Sergei you've got to get another driller, and that'll set us back bad. We're too far behind to take any chances."

It was true enough. In spite of all they could do, they were falling behind. The fire, the flood, Spud's blindness—so many things had conspired against them that Drew began to doubt they could finish within the three months allotted them. So thirty days before their permit lapsed he filed an application for an extension of time. Days passed without a reply.

"I don't like it," he told Spud. "We can't let our time run out just before we hit pay-sand."

But Spud was confident. "They'll give us an extension. They just want to keep us on the griddle."

"I'm not so sure. I'd like to know what they're up to."

Next morning he knew. Nan Alter telephoned him the unwelcome news that he could not hope for an extension of time—Diaz had flatly recommended against it.

"I've tried to make him change his mind, Drew," Nan said. "Nothing moves him. Do you need that extension badly?"

"Very badly."

"Then you'd better come up and talk to him."

"I'll be there in an hour."

As he drove toward the foothills, Drew wondered if Diaz had definitely aligned himself with Alter. Was he in reality nothing more than another of Alter's puppets? Hard to believe; but if it were true, then Drew had arrayed against him the two most powerful figures in the valley. With Diaz's prestige and influence, a rejection of Drew's appeal would be final.

He found Nan waiting for him outside the hospital.

"I've been talking with Hernandez again," she told him. "He won't even listen. He hates you, Drew."

Somberly Drew nodded.

"There may be one way to change his mind," she went on. "If Hernandez knows how much this well means to me, he may relent."

"You don't want him to know that, do you?"

"I do if it's the only way to save you."

Drew thought for a moment. "Better wait until we see what his reasons are for refusing the extension," he counseled. "Can I talk to him now?"

"If he knew you were here, he wouldn't even see you. We'd better go right in."

And Drew followed her into Diaz's office.

The physician sat behind his desk, writing, and at sight of Thorpe he rose.

"I had hoped to be spared the sight of you for all time." He glared accusingly at Nan.

Drew walked forward. "I came to find out why you're trying to ruin me."

"I'm not interested in ruining you Mr. Thorpe."

"That's hard to believe. Why are you refusing me an extension of time?"

"The law provides that an extension will be granted if the operator shows good faith and good reason for asking more time. Isn't a fire and a flood and a blinded partner reason enough? I've complied with every rule of your government."

Diaz laid down his cigarette holder. "Let me make myself clear. I refused because I am trying to keep oil concessions out of the hands of irresponsible adventurers like you. It was a mistake to give you a permit in the first place; yet, having given it, I felt it only fair to allow you to exercise that permit to the end. But there will be no extension. This country can never be developed by shoestring wildcaters without responsibility or financial backing. We want large, reputable companies who can deal with our government and whom we can have confidence in. That was the very gist of the new law."

"When you talk of large, reputable companies, you mean Franz Alter's company, don't you?"

"Yes, why not?"

"Do you really want to know? Why don't you go and see how the planet trade agreements are working out in other South American republics? So far, in two of them the presidents are puppets of Alter's government. In Costa Rica the Planet gang own the port of Laguna. They've fortified it, and they're systematically working their way into every position of importance."

Army Gunners Use 'Tokyo Trolley' In Aerial School

By MURAY M. MOLIER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WENDOVER, Utah.—Tojo wouldn't like to go for a ride on the "Tokyo Trolley" at the Wendover Army air base bombing and gunnery school.

Tojo wouldn't like to take this "trolley." It is a moveable gun mount from which thousands of American aerial gunners have learned to man the splitting machine guns that shoot their streams of steel and death at the Japanese premier's soldiers, sailors and aviators.

Tojo wouldn't like it because the targets at which the U. S. gunners shoot as the "trolley" chugs along are replicas of Japanese planes. And the Rising Sun emblems on those targets are filled with holes.

The "Tokyo Trolley" is only one phase of the gunnery practice that the school staff gives the men sent here. During their course at the school, they learn to handle every weapon with which America's huge bombers are equipped.

The school was established last fall. Orders came through for gunnery instruction to be included on the course at the Wendover base, which previously had been devoted primarily to bombing practice.

A site was selected on a mountainside a few miles north of the main base, which is on the western edge of the vast Bonneville salt flats, 130 miles west of Salt Lake City.

But there was no appropriation to construct facilities at the school. Lieut. Col. Robert N. Dippy, Wendover base commanding officer, called in members of his staff.

Engineers Build School

Capt. William D. Keys was given the task of building the school in the valley. With Army engineers, he scoured the West for abandoned CCC camps, sawed them up, marked the sections, hauled them up, and put them together again to serve as quarters. Equipment from the base on the flats was "borrowed" by the gunnery school.

The men moved into the school as ordered right on schedule. The establishment costs less than $20,000, reasonable enough compared to the cost of other schools of this type. Water had to be hauled in for them until a few weeks ago.

Commanding officer of the school is First Lieut. Levi Hampton, who was Keys' right-hand man in its construction. Many of the unique instruction gadgets are brain children of Hampton, his handful of youthful officers and his crew of resourceful non-commissioned officers and enlisted men.

Also at the school are mounts where guns are placed that are deliberately put out of commission. A student is given a handful of ammunition and told to put the gun into commission again by himself.

There is a skeet range to teach coordination in following a flying target. There are class rooms of all kinds—everything it takes to teach a man to shoot straight and fast.

Success of the gunnery school was so outstanding in its first winter of operation that it is soon to be quadrupled in size, this time with a large appropriation.

As soon as possible, all gunners of the Second Air Force, strictly a heavy bombardment group centering around the Northwestern and Intermountain states, will be trained here—and trained well.

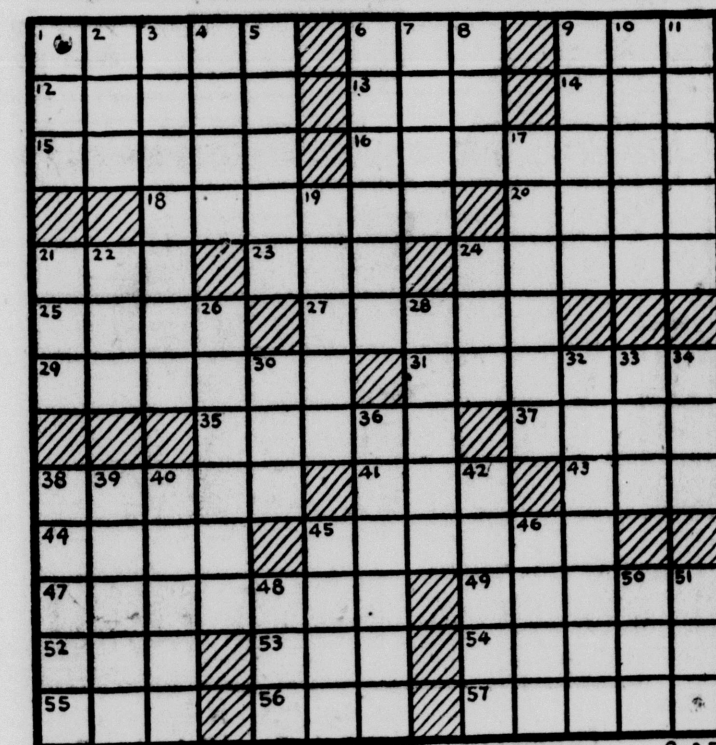

Malnutrition is believed to be the chief reason for the high death rate among children in India.

"The families of the earth have never been separated in all history as the people at this present time. Members of families have been scattered upon the face of the earth, family circles are now broken as in no time in all history. It is with this thought in mind that our United Lutheran church in America has designated this Sunday, when members of families are to gather in God's house and worship, and be united in the praise of God, in spite of distance and physical barriers. A strong tie binds the family together in their faith in God. It is well that we as Christian people unite in prayer and worship and seek the blessing and protection of the Almighty God, who is the head of all the families of the earth. The unity of the family may be easily realized as the various members gather in the House of God and lift their voices and hearts in praise and worship."—Rev. Keister.

WHEN WILL THIS WAR BE OVER?

A FATTISH MAN we overheard in a Pullman diner said it would be over some time during the week of November 11. He'd talked to "a man who knew a man who was high up in the army" who'd said the Allies were planning to terminate the war on the 25th Anniversary of the Armistice.

The fattish man doesn't know.

A woman, who is president of a literary club in a medium-sized town in Colorado, says the war will be over in April, 1944.

This is (we quote her) "just a year after the fall of Tunisia, which is about the time it ought to take us to beat Hitler and clean up on the Japs."

The lady doesn't know.

The fact is that nobody can look into a crystal ball and tell when this war is going to end. Nobody, not even the General Staff, can look at the war maps, survey the disposition of troops, weigh our might against the enemy's might, and tell when this war will end.

There's only one thing we can be sure of—just this one thing:

This war will end sooner if everybody on our side—and that includes you—pitches in and does everything he can to help end it. "Everything" means, among other jobs, buying all the War Bonds you can afford. All.

Your government is asking every citizen to purchase—during September—$100 extra in War Bonds. At least $100 over and above what he has been buying.

Does this sound like a lot to you? Well, the only answer is our men need a lot. A General Sherman tank still costs $90,000; a Flying Fortress still costs $450,000.

You can buy your extra $100 worth, can't you? If you think you can't, read over every story in today's paper that tells about some soldiers, some sailors, some marines, some merchant seamen dying somewhere in this war-ripped world.

And remember—they're dying for you.

Salem Overcomes Halftime Lead To Beat Ravenna, 14-13

Greene Is Sparkplug Of Barrett's Team Which Clicks In Second Half

Winning a whole ball game in one quarter isn't the orthodox way of doing it, but the Salem Quakers did just that as they came from behind to score a 14 to 13 triumph over the Ravenna Ravens last night at Rely stadium before 5,000 thrilled football fans.

After trailing 13 to 0 at the half, Salem opened the third quarter with an offensive that culminated in two touchdowns, and two valuable extra points in less than half of the stanza.

The outstanding performance of the game can justly be credited to Captain Dick Greene, 147-pound halfback, who scored both Salem touchdowns on runs of 27 yards and 52 yards, kicked both extra points, and played a whole of a defensive ball game. Greene executed some of the finest broken field running Salem fans have seen for many a year as he had the Ravenna tacklers trying three and four times each play to get him down.

His drives through the line throughout the game were exceptional and his tackles on the defense were hard and sure.

Coach Gilcrest's Ravenna eleven turned in a good ball game and set the Quakers down a peg or two in the first half as they scored early in the opening quarter on a pass Shafer to Mattison.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

Salem Overconfident
Coach Barrett said he believed the Quakers were overconfident and laid the poor performance in the opening half to the fact that his team hadn't prepared for a T formation and the varying defense the Ravens used throughout the game. Ravenna used 7-1-2-1, 6-3-2, 5-4-2 defensive formations and the Quakers were baffled for the most of the first half, Salem fumbled set Ravenna in good scoring positions and gave them the opportunities they needed to pile up that 13 to 0 lead.

Coach Gilcrest of Ravenna, said after the game that he liked the fighting spirit of the Salem team and he didn't mind losing a ball game like that one. Ravenna was sparked by Paul Shafer, 170-pound back, who passed and ran the Ravens to their two scores.

Ravenna Scores Early
Ravenna almost scored early in the first quarter after Salem had received Mascio's kickoff and tried the Ravenna line several times.

The Salem Booster club will hold its meeting Tuesday night at the Saxon club when Coach Ben Barrett will show motion pictures of the Salem-Alumni game and make comments on the Quakers' first two ball games.

The public is invited to the meeting which will start at 8. A visitor at last night's Salem-Ravenna clash was former Coach Ray Overturn, now stationed at Fort Custer, Mich.

Shea then fumbled and Ravenna recovered on the Quaker 41. Ravenna lost yardage and kicked to Wise who was smothered on the 10 yard line. Shea lost four yards before Wise kicked to Ravenna's 40-yard line. Shafer then chucked a lateral to Thompson who ran the Salem 26. Ravenna lost the ball on downs after Green knocked the 4th pass down.

Salem took the ball over on the 23 yard line and Greene fumbled back to the 10 where Ravenna recovered. Shafer went through tackle for two yards, and Kieselback knocked his way to the four yard line. Shafer was stopped by Plegue for no gain. Shafer then heaved a pass over line and into the arms of Mattison who leaped high in the air to take the ball and come down for the first score. Mascio's conversion was good.

Ravenna Scores Again
After a kick by Kieselback to the Salem 10 yard line, Salem tried the Ravenna line, got nowhere and Shea fumbled on the 23. Kieselback of Ravenna recovered.

Ravenna took the ball on the 23 yard line and scored on the next play with Shafer passing again. Fleishman took the pass and went over to make it 13 to 0 in favor of the Ravens. Mascio's kick for the extra point was wide.

The Quakers staved off another Ravenna scoring threat just before the end of the half when the Ravens worked the ball to the Salem two-yard line and then fumbled. Plegue recovered. Greene then punted to the Ravenna 20-yard line for the longest kick of the game, 65 yards.

Quakers Score In Third
Just after the kickoff by Greene to Ravenna, Salem took the ball over on the Ravenna 39-yard line after a short kick by Kieselback. Shea circled the right end for 8 yards, went over tackle for 10 more to bring the ball to the Ravenna 27 yard line. Greene then cut off tackle 27 yards to fight his way through five Ravenna tacklers and score standing up. His extra point cleared the bars in perfect form.

The second score for Salem came after a march that started on the Quaker nine yard line. Green started the drive with a 22 yard sprint that brought the ball to the 31. He then went over right guard for two more and hit left tackle for 4 to the Salem 37. Shea counted off 8 yards through right tackle and then was stopped with one yard gain on the Salem 48 yard line. Greene then cut back after going through left tackle and raced, dodged, and danced for 52 yards to score. He outran three Ravenna men from the 20 to the goal line. His kick for the point after touchdown was good and Salem led 14 to 13.

The ball game from then on was a series of passes by Ravenna which almost connected several times, and a good exhibition of running plays by the Quakers in the last quarter. The Quakers had the ball in the center of the field when the game ended the game.

Statistics About Equal
Salem outgained the Ravens 283 yards to 150 in rushing, but the Ravens passed 19 times and completed 10 for a total of 165 yards.

FOOTBALL SEASON REALLY GETS DOWN TO BUSINESS TODAY

Georgia and University of California Will Meet At Los Angeles

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—After a pair of warmup Saturdays, football really opens its season today with Georgia and the University of California at Los Angeles, the Rose Bowl game of Jan. 1, ticketed for a rocky day.

The Uclans open defense of their Pacific coast crown by barging into Southern California. Georgia offers its 4-Fs and freshmen as a probable sacrifice for the machine welded together by Coach Bernie Moore at Louisiana State.

Of the eight clubs which participated in bowl games last winter, UCLA and Georgia appear the weakest as the 1943 campaign starts rolling, although Boston college, Alabama and Tennessee have dropped the sport.

While some of the Bowl teams have lost their glamour, Notre Dame as usual has its share. The Irish re-open their feud with Pittsburgh today and 60,000 spectators are expected.

Battle Of The Day
In what may be the best battle of the day, Georgia Tech is the host to North Carolina. Tech is regarded by some as equal to the team of a year ago while North Carolina has a squad of 92, 40 of them backs.

In the same sector, Duke's powerful eleven meets the University of Richmond, bolstered by 10 players from the potent William & Mary team of 1942. St. Mary's and all-female share the west coast interest with the Trojan-UCLA contest.

The midwest is studded with high class frays. Marquette entertains Purdue and Northwestern unleashes Otto Graham on Indiana.

The Iowa Seabawks invade Ohio State in what may be a thriller. Camp Grant tangles with Wisconsin. Minnesota opens against Missouri. Iowa will try to sink the Lakes crew and Michigan frolics with Western Michigan.

Eastern Tussles
Tulsa, without the Dobbs brothers, tangles with Southern Methodist while Texas, Texas A. & M. and Rice all take on air field foes.

In the better eastern games Princeton and Penn bump into each other at Philadelphia. Army's Cadets open against Villanova. The North Carolina Pre-Flighters visit Navy and Rochester huts its third victory with Colgate as the foe.

Cornell tangles with Sampson naval base, Penn State and Bucknell are rivals in an all-Pennsylvania meeting and Yale's injury-riddled squad opposes the U. S. Coast Guard Academy team.

REDS IN SECOND PLACE IN NAT'L
CINCINNATI, Sept. 25.—The Cincinnati Reds, now in possession of second place in the National league, play a twilight-night double bill with the Boston Braves today.

The Reds moved into the second slot yesterday by whipping the New York Giants, 5 to 4, while the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 1, forcing the Flatbush Flyers to move to the third rung in league standings.

The smallest crowd of the season, 747 cash customers, were at Crosley field to watch the Reds and Giants perform yesterday.

All the scoring was jammed into two innings. The Giants bunched five of their eight hits, one a homer by Rookie Charley Med, off Ray Starr in the second inning to score all their runs.

The Washington Senators were idle and rest again today, leaving the field clear to the Yankees to clinch the championship.

Both the other games in the American league went into extra innings. The Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics battled 16 innings to a 3-3 tie.

At Boston Joe Dobson and Ed Klemm staged a mound duel as the Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0 in ten innings.

In the National league the St. Louis Cardinals cracked the Brooklyn Dodgers 5-1. The defeat dropped the Dodgers into third place as the Cincinnati Reds nosed out the New York Giants 5-4.

The Chicago Cubs spotted the Phillies four runs in the first inning and then battled back to win 7-4.

Pittsburgh and Boston were idle.

Fight Results

on passing. Salem complete 3 of 13 passes for 37 yards. Salem had 11 first downs while Ravenna garnered 9. The Quaker punts by Greene and Wise averaged 32 yards as Kieselback averaged 27 yards per punt for the Ravens.

Salem line play was ragged, especially in the first half. John Plegue was the best performer in the Quaker line and the Raven's outstanding lineman was Fleishman, an end. "Butch" Wise played excellent football and was much stronger on defense than in the game against Sebring last week.

LAUGH TEAM TO PLAY AT CAMPS

HOLLYWOOD'S laugh baseball team, which shortly will appear before servicemen, poses for its picture. It's the only seven-player team in existence. (International)

Boxing drills in the army—and in the other branches of the service—are arousing interest among thousands of men, who never before thought much about the ring sport.

After the war is won and these men return to civilian life, they will make excellent fans. They will crowd the arenas to see fights, which will mean bigger gates and, for the fighters, bigger purses.

Many of the returning service men, have learned some of the fundamentals of boxing while in uniform, will want to try their luck in the professional ring.

Bond Is Admission Price to Movie

Monday has been designated as "free movie day" at the State theater. It was announced today by Manager N. L. Walker.

On that day the purchase of a War Bond at the theater will admit the buyer free to any performance during the day or night. And the film, "Best Foot Forward," a technical color musical, will be worth the price.

"Free movie day" is part of the nationwide campaign on behalf of the Third War Loan in which the film industry is taking part. The arrangement was made possible through the cooperation of the distributors division of the War Activities committee.

Distributors agreed to forego their percentage rentals for attractions played on that day and the movie exhibitors, in turn, offer free admission to their theaters if a bond is purchased.

Quota club members will be on hand to help with orders for bonds.

Standley May Tell Russia's Future Aims

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—Soviet Russia's attitude toward the post-war plans of the United Nations concerned diplomatic Washington today following the return of William H. Standley, America's ambassador to the U.S.S.R.

Admiral Standley was scheduled to meet Secretary of State Cordell Hull to talk over Russia's role in the post-war world. The U.S. senate, which must ratify any peace treaty or foreign alliance, already has taken the "hands off" viewpoint until the views of Russia and England are known.

Many Americans are said to be distrustful of Premier Joseph Stalin and his Soviet regime. This group has been urging the negotiation of a treaty with the Soviets before the United States binds itself to any post-war peace program.

Says Aims Not Clear Senator Nye (R-ND) expressed the senate majority opinion this way:

"The United States should not announce any post-war policy until both Russia and Britain have made their post-war aims clearer. There were indications that Standley would not return to Moscow. W. Averell Harriman has been prominently mentioned as the new ambassador.

Both houses of congress were in recess today.

On the Washington domestic front, Senator Thomas (D-Okla.) told the Office of Price Administration (OPA) that the Democratic party would face a 1944 "revolt" unless OPA changed practices Thomas claimed were "contrary to the American way of life." Thomas said that in Oklahoma he had found OPA policies and regulations had created a "wave of resentment."

Congressional fiscal experts began discussing means of raising an additional $12,000,000,000 on top of the $38,000,000,000 now collected, annually. Principal point in the discussions, reports said, was a proposal to boost corporation levies by another 1 per cent to raise the annual "take" to $50,000,000,000. The house ways and means committee will start work October 4 on a new revenue bill.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

you can't compel moral support from India if she doesn't want to give it. They are recognizing, too, with uneasiness that many American activities are in Bengal, for the Calcutta zone is center of much of the air communication with China.

WHILE this concern is in American minds, little or nothing is being said publicly. After all, it's a delicate subject in view of the fact that India is British territory. This article may be among the first of its kind, and it's being written because I think the people of this country and our neighbors in North and South America, should know what goes forward. We don't want to intrude in the Imperial family affair, but the Indian situation ceases to be a family matter when it affects the welfare of all the United Nations, both now and post-war. England's Allies have been eagerly hoping that the Indian problem would be solved quickly. My own investigations in India convinced me that the Indian leaders regretted the collapse of the Cripps negotiations and would like another chance.

I believe the Indians would bury differences among themselves and with the British, and join hands in a provisional war-government (with out prejudice to disputed claims)—if they had the opportunity. Such opportunity would depend on Britain's abandonment of her decision not to reopen the case during the war.

I know distinguished and highly placed people who hold the same views.

Induct WAVES Platoon

EAST LIVERPOOL, Sept. 25—A large group of applicants who passed mental and physical examinations today for places in the newly-formed Keramos platoon of East Liverpool district WAVES, will be sworn in at a public ceremony today.

Triples Bond Quota

Its citizens have subscribed $2,515,150.75, far beyond the goal of $980,000.

Architect Succumbs

CINCINNATI, Sept. 25—Bernard P. Steinkamp, 65, architect-designer of many Cincinnati structures, is dead.

DEATH — is U. S. war slang for edible sweets. We can't send our fighting boys all the tid-bits we may like but there is one way we may surely please them. To buy War Bonds to the very limit of our ability and an extra $100.00 Invasion Bond during September.

ABANDON SMOLENSK

The Berlin broadcast said further that German forces had abandoned Roslavl, 65 miles southeast of Smolensk on the Dnieper river.

The fall of Kiev also appeared imminent. Charging Red troops were separated only by the breadth of the Dnieper river from the enemy, Moscow announced.

Smolensk Fell in '41

Smolensk, which has two railroads entering it from the west and three from the east, fell to the Germans July 16, 1941.

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko threw thousands of his best troops into a tremendous battle to recapture the city in December, 1941, but was forced back. Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov tried again the following spring, and was stopped only after the Germans had counter-attacked more than 30 times.

Roslavl, which lies midway between Smolensk and Bryansk, is of no great industrial or strategic importance, even though it had been strongly fortified by the Germans as part of the Dnieper line defenses. There was every indication that the fall of Smolensk and the expected capitulation of Kiev would mean in cold, hard, tactical truth that Germany has lost her fight with Russia.

Offensive Center

The Germans mentioned another attempt by Red army forces to cross the river below Gomel, at a point where the Pripiet river enters the Dnieper. This would serve as a jumping off place for a Russian drive into White Russia.

Russia's great siege guns were already mounted at Borispol, 17 miles southeast of Kiev.

Breaching on the Dnieper barrier at Kiev probably would force the Nazis to abandon the whole length of the lower reaches of the Dnieper valley to escape encirclement.

Collapse of the mighty Smolensk stronghold is expected to roll back the Germans to White Russia and the boundaries of the Baltic pawn states—Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.

YANKS PUSH ON

difficult terrain and demolitions," the announcement said.

The first of the daily headquarters announcements made no mention of the situation on the island of Corsica, where French patriot forces, aided by American Rangers, were said to be closing in on the last of the German defenders.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, famous leader of the Eighth army, appeared at Fifth army headquarters yesterday and conferred with Gen. Clark on what the latter afterward described as future plans for operation of the two armies.

Montgomery said he had wagered a correspondent five shillings ($1) against his spending Christmas at home, adding: "Just where we will spend it I don't know."

A delayed dispatch said Montgomery had welcomed troops of the British Fifth corps into the ranks of the Eighth on Sept. 22, declaring:

"It's us out here and what we do that keeps the morale high on the home front. If the morale at home went down we might well lose the war."

Casualties Heavy

The advance of the Fifth army, officially described as "several miles," put Allied forces astride several crossroads north and northeast of Salerno.

"Very heavy casualties" have been inflicted on the enemy since the Fifth army's big-scale assault toward Naples began, official reports said, and it was stated that the Fifth army had captured 2,000 German prisoners since the landing at Salerno on Sept. 9, and the bag of captives was growing constantly.

American and British losses in the offensive have been comparatively light, it was said.

ASHLAND FIRE

dense and the big J. L. Donley & Bros. grain elevator. Also destroyed were two restaurant buildings and five other parked automobiles.

Fire companies from neighboring Mansfield, Norwalk, Wooster, Medina, Lodi, Jeromesville, West Salem and Shelby assisted local firemen and Civilian Defense workers in battling the quickly spreading flames. Burning oil was carried along an east side creek and damaged a Y. M. C. A. playing field.

At Cleveland, the Erie said the fire started when 23 cars of an east-bound oil train were derailed, but that the cause remained unknown pending receipt of fuller reports. Erie's main line was blocked, so traffic was rerouted over the adjacent New York Central "Big Four" tracks.
